A Product Sales report provides a record of what each of your customers has purchased during a user-defined period of time. You can include information in the report based on specifying a range by customer name, salesperson key, item key, or date. You can also specify to generate the report for a certain customer class or all customer classes.

The Product Sales report is a tool that allows you to evaluate your product as follows.

- If sequenced by customer name or key, the report shows you what each customer has been buying from you.
- If sequenced by item key, the report shows you who is buying each item.
- If sequenced by salesperson key, the report shows you what each of your salespeople are selling.

Product sales can be reported for a specific day or for several years, depending on the amount of history you've retained. Or, you could evaluate how well a certain group or individual item sold during a particular period.
